

MEW

METROPOLITAN. n. f. [metropolitanus, Latin.] A bishop of the mother church; an archbishop.
He was promoted to Canterbury upon the death of Dr. Bancroft, that metropolitan, who understood the church excellently, and countenanced men of the greatest parts in learning. Clarendon.
METROPOLITAN. adj. Belonging to a metropolis.
Their patriarch, of a covetous desire to enrich himself, had forborn to institute metropolitan bishops. Raleigh.
METROPOLITICAL. adj. [from metropolis.] Chief or principal of cities.
He fearing the power of the Christians was gone as far as Gratia, the metropolitan city of Stiria. Knolles.
METTLE. n. f. [corrupted from metal, but commonly written so when the metaphorical sense is used.]
1. Spirit; spiriteliness; courage.
What a blunt fellow is this grown to be?
He was quick mettle when he went to school. Shakespeare.
I had rather go with fir priest than fir knight: I care not who knows too much of my mettle. Shakespeare. Twelfth Night.
Upon this heaviness of the king's forces, interpreted to be fear and want of mettle, divers resorted to the feditious.
Hayward's Edw. VI.
He had given so frequent testimony of signal courage in several actions, that his mettle was never suspected. Clarendon.
Tis more to guide than spur the mule's steed,
Refrain his fury, than provoke his speed;
The winged courier, like a generous horse,
Shows most true mettle when you check his course. Pope.
2. Substance: this at least should be mettle.
Oh thou! whole self-same mettle,
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puffed,
Engenders the black toad, and adder blue. Shakespeare.
METTLED. adj. [from mettle.] Spiritely; courageous; full of ardour; full of fire.
Such a light and mettled dance
Saw you never. Benj. Johnson.
Nor would you find it easy to compose
The mettled reeds, when from their nostrils flows
The scorching fire that in their entrails glows. Addison.
METTLESOME. adj. [from mettle.] Spiritely; lively; gay; brisk; airy; fiery; courageous.
Their force differs from true spirit, as much as a vicious from a mettlesome horse. Tatler, N^o. 61.
METTLESOMELY. adv. [from mettlesome.] With spiriteliness.
MEW. n. f. [mue, French.]
1. A cage; an inclosure; a place where any thing is confined.
Forth-coming from her darksome meu,
Where the all day did hide her hated hew. Fairy Queen.
There then she does transform to monstrous hues,
And horribly mis-shapes with ugly fights,
Captiv'd eternally in iron meus,
And darksome dens, where Titan his face never shows. Fairy Queen, b. ii.
Her lofty hand would of itself refuse
To touch the dainty needle or nice thread;
She hated chambers, closets, secret meus,
And in broad fields preserv'd her maidenhead. Fairfax.
2. [Map, Saxon.] A sea-fowl.
Among the first sort we reckon coots, fanderlings, and meaves. Carew.
The vefel sticks, and shews her open'd side,
And on her shatter'd mast the meus in triumph ride. Dryd.
MEW. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To shut up; to confine; to imprison; to inclose.
He in dark corners meu'd,
Mutter'd of matters as their books them shew'd. Hubbard.
Unto the bush her eye did sudden glance,
In which vain Braggadocio was meu'd,
And saw it stir. Fairy Queen, b. ii.
Why should your fears, which, as they say, attend
The steps of wrong, then move you to meu up
Your tender kinsman. Shakespeare. King John.
Fair Hermia, question your desires;
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether if you yield not to your father's choice,
You can endure the livery of a nun;
For aye to be in shady cloister meu'd,
To live a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymns to the cold, fruitless moon. Shakespeare.
More pity that the eagle should be meu'd,
While kites and buzzards prey at liberty. Shakespeare.
Feign them sick,
Close meu'd in their sedans, for fear of air. Dryden's Juu.
It is not possible to keep a young gentleman from vice by a total ignorance of it, unless you will all his life meu him up in a closet, and never let him go into company. Locke.
2. To shed the feathers. It is, I believe, used in this sense, because birds are, by close confinement, brought to shed their feathers.
I should discourse of hawks, and then treat of their azyies, meuwings, cutting, and renovation of their feathers. Walter.

MIC

The sun hath meu'd his beams from off his lamp,
And majesty defac'd the royal stamp. Clarendon.
Nine times the moon had meu'd her horns, at length
With travel weary, unsupplied with strength,
And with the burden of her womb oppress'd,
Sabeen fields afford her needful rest. Dryden.
3. [Miauler, French.] To cry as a cat.
Let Hercules himself do what he may,
The cat will meu, the dog will have his day. Shakespeare.
They are not improveable beyond their own genius: a dog will never learn to meu, nor a cat to bark. Grew's Cos.
To MEWL. v. n. [miauler, French.] To squall as a child.
The infant
Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms. Shakespeare.
MEZERON. n. f. A species of spurge laurel.
Mezeron is common in our gardens, and on the Alps and Pyrenean mountains: every part of this shrub is acrid and pungent, and inflames the mouth and throat. Mill.
MEZZOTINTO. n. f. [Italian.] A kind of graving, so named as nearly resembling paint, the word importing half-painted: it is done by beating the whole into asperity with a hammer, and then rubbing it down with a stone to the resemblance intended.
MEYNT. adv. Mingled. Obsolete.
The salt Medway, that trickling streams
Adown the dales of Kent,
Till with the elder brother Thames
His brackish waves be meint. Spenser's Pastoral.
MISASM. n. f. [from misavus, iniquo, to infect.] Such particles or atoms as are supposed to arise from disordered, putrefying, or poisonous bodies, and to affect people at a distance.
The plague is a malignant fever, caused through pestilential miasms insinuating into the humoral and constituent parts of the body. Harvey on Conjunctions.
MICE. the plural of mouse.
Mice that mar the land. Sam. vi. 5.
MICHAELMAS. n. f. [Michael and masi.] The feast of the archangel Michael, celebrated on the twenty-ninth of September.
They compounded to furnish ten oxen after Michaelmas for thirty pounds price. Carew.
MICHE. v. n. To be secret or covered; to lie hid.
Marry this is micbing malice; it means mischief. Shakespeare.
MICHER. n. f. [from miche.] A lazy loiterer, who skulks about in corners and by-places, and keeps out of sight; a hedge-creeper. Hammer.
Micb or Mick is still retained in the cant language for an indolent, lazy fellow.
How tenderly her tender hands between
In ivory cage she did the miche bind. Sidney.
Shall the blessed fun of heav'n prove a miche, and cat blackberries? a question not to be asked. Shall the son of England prove a thief, and take purses? a question to be asked. Shakespeare's Henry IV, p. i.
MICKLE. adj. [mcel, Saxon.] Much; great. Obsolete. In Scotland it is pronounced mickle.
This reade is rife that oftentime
Great cumburs fall unsoft:
In humble dales is footing fast,
The trode is not so tickle,
And though one fall through heedless haste,
Yet is his mis not mickle. Spenser's Pastoral.
Many a little makes a mickle. Camden's Remains.
If I to-day die with Frenchmens rage,
To-morrow I shall die with mickle age. Shakespeare. Henry VI.
O, mickle is the pow'ful grace, that lies
In plants, herbs, stones, and their true qualities. Shakespeare.
All this tract that fronts the falling fun,
A noble peer, of mickle trust and power,
Has in his charge. Milton.
MICROCOSM. n. f. [micro and cosmos.] The little world. Man is so called as being imagined, by some fanciful philosophers, to have in him something analogous to the four elements.
You see this in the map of my microcosm. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.
She to whom this world must itself refer,
As suburbs, or the microcosm of her;
She, she is dead; she's dead, when thou know'st this,
Thou know'st how lame a creeper this world is. Donne.
As in this our microcosm, the heart
Heat, spirit, motions gives to every part:
So Rome's victorious influence did disperse
All her own virtues through the universe. Denham.
Philosophers say, that man is a microcosm, or little world, resembling in miniature every part of the great; and the body natural may be compared to the body politic. Swift.
MICROGRAPHY. n. f. [micro and graphein.] The description of the parts of such very small objects as are discernable only with a microscope.

The

MID

The honey-bag is the stomach, which they always fill to satisfy and to spare, vomiting up the greater part of the honey to be kept against winter: a curious description and figure of the sting see in Mr. Hook's micrography. Grew's Musaeum.
MICROSCOPE. n. f. [micro and scopos; microscope, Fr.] An optick instrument, contrived various ways to give to the eye a large appearance of many objects which could not otherwise be seen.
If the eye were so acute as to rival the finest microscopes, and to discern the smallest hair upon the leg of a gnat, it would be a curse, and not a blessing, to us; it would make all things appear rugged and deformed; the most finely polished crystal would be uneven and rough; the sight of our own selves would affright us; the smoothest skin would be beset all over with ragged scales and bristly hairs. Bentley.
The critick eye, that microscope of wit,
Sees hairs and pores, examines bit by bit. Dunciad, b. iv.
MICROMETER. n. f. [micro and metron; micrometre, French.] An instrument contrived to measure small spaces.
MICROSCOPICAL. u. f. [from microscope.]
MICROSCOPICK. u. f. [from microscope.]
1. Made by a microscope.
Make microscopical observations of the figure and bulk of the constituent parts of all fluids. Arbutnot and Pope.
2. Affected by a microscope.
Evading even the microscopical eye!
Full nature swarms with life. Thomson's Summer.
3. Resembling a microscope.
Why has not man a microscopick eye?
For this plain reason, Man is not a fly.
Say what the use, were finer opticks given,
T'inspect a mite, not comprehend the heav'n? Pope.
MID. adj. [contracted from middle, or derived from mid, Dutch.]
1. Middle; equally between two extremes.
No more the mounting larks, while Daphne sings,
Shall, lifting in mid air, suspend their wings. Pope.
Ere the mid hour of night, from tent to tent,
Unweary'd, through th' numerous host he past. Rowe.
2. It is much used in composition.
MID-COURSE. n. f. [mid and course.] Middle of the way.
Why in the East
Darkness ere day's mid-course? and morning light,
More orient in yon western cloud, that draws
O'er the blue firmament a radiant white. Milton.
MID-DAY. n. f. [mid and day.] Noon; meridian.
Who shoots at the mid-day fun, though he be sure he shall never hit the mark, yet as sure he is he shall shoot higher than he who aims but at a bush. Sidney, b. ii.
His sparkling eyes, replete with awful fire,
More dazzled and drove back his enemies,
Than mid-day sun fierce bent against their faces. Shakespeare.
Who have before, or shall write after thee,
Their works, though toughly labour'd, will be
Like infancy or age to man's firm stay,
Or early or late twilights to mid-day. Donne.
Did he not lead you through the mid-day fun,
And clouds of dust? Did not his temples glow
In the same fultry winds and scorching heats?
Yet the stout fairy 'mongst the middest crowd,
Thought all their glory vain in knightly view. Fa. Qu.
MIDDE. adj. [moele, Saxon.]
1. Equally distant from the two extremes.
The lowest virtues draw praise from the common people; the middle virtues work in them astonishment; but of the highest virtues they have no sense. Bacon's Essays.
A middle station of life, within reach of those conveniences which the lower orders of mankind must necessarily want, and yet without embarrassment of greatness. Rogers.
To deliver all his fleet to the Romans, except ten middle-sized brigantines. Arbutnot on Coins.
I like people of middle understanding and middle rank. Sto.
2. Intermediate; intervening.
Will, seeking good, finds many middle ends. Davies.
3. Middle finger; the long finger.
You first introduce the middle finger of the left-hand. Sharp.
MIDDLE. n. f.
1. Part equally distant from two extremities; the part remote from the verge.
There come people down by the middle of the land. Judge.
With roof so low that under it
They never stand, but lie or sit;
And yet so foul, that who is in,
Is to the middle leg in prison. Hudibras, p. i.
2. The time that passes, or events that happen, between the beginning and end.
The causes and designs of an action are the beginning; the effects of these causes, and the difficulties that are met with in the execution of these designs, are the middle; and the unravelling and resolution of these difficulties are the end. Dryden and Lee's Oedipus.

MID

MIDDLE-AGED. adj. [middle and age.] Placed about the middle of life.
A middle-aged man, that was half grey, half brown, took a fancy to marry two wives. L'Estrange's Fables.
The middle-aged support fasting the best, because of the oily parts abounding in the blood. Arbutnot on Aliments.
I found you a very young man, and left you a middle-aged one: you knew me a middle-aged man, and now I am an old one. Swift to Pope.
MIDDLEMOST. adj. [from middle.] Being in the middle.
Why have not some beasts more than four feet, suppose six, and the middlemost shorter than the rest. Morse.
The outmost fringe vanished first, and the middlemost next, and the innermost last. Newton's Opticks.
The outward stars, with their systems of planets, must necessarily have descended toward the middlemost system of the universe, whither all would be most strongly attracted from all parts of a finite space. Bentley's Sermons.
MIDDLING. adj. [from middle.]
1. Of middle rank.
A middling sort of a man, left well enough to pass by his father, could never think he had enough so long as any man had more. L'Estrange's Fables.
2. Of moderate size; having moderate qualities of any kind.
The bigness of a church ought to be no greater than that (nt) which the voice of a preacher of middling lungs will easily extend. Graunt's Bills of Mortality.
Longinus preferred the sublime genius that sometimes errs, to the middling or indifferent one, which makes few faults, but seldom rises to any excellence. Dryden.
Middling his head, and prone to earth his view. Tickell.
MIDLAND. adj. [mid and land.]
1. That which is remote from the coast.
The same name is given to the inlanders, or midland inhabitants of this island, by Caesar. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
The midland towns abounding in wealth, shews that her riches are intern and domestick. Howel's Vocal Forest.
The various dialects of the English in the North and West, render their expressions many times unintelligible to the other, and both scarce intelligible to the midland. Hale.
2. In the midst of the land; mediterranean.
There was the Plymouth Squadron now come in,
Which twice on Biscay's working bay had been,
And on the midland sea the French had aw'd. Dryden.
MIDGE. n. f. [moege, Saxon.] A gnat.
MID-HEAVEN. n. f. [mid and heaven.] The middle of the sky.
But the hot hell that always in him burns,
Though in mid-heaven, soon ended his delight. Milton.
MIDLEG. n. f. [mid and leg.] Middle of the leg.
He had fifty attendants, young men all, in white fatten, loose coats to the midleg, and stockings of white silk. Bacon.
MIDMOST. adj. [from mid, or contracted from middlemost: this is one of the words which have not a comparative, though they seem to have a superlative degree.] The middle.
Now van to van the foremost squadrons meet,
The midmost battles hasting up behind. Dryden.
Hear himself repine
At fate's unequal laws; and at the clue,
Which, mercilefs in length, the midmost sifter drew. Dry.
What dulness dropt among her sons imprest,
Like motion, from one circle to the rest:
So from the midmost the nutation spreads
Round, and more round o'er all the sea of heads. Pope.
MIDNIGHT. n. f. [mid and night.] Milton seems to have accented this last syllable. The noon of night; the depth of night; twelve at night.
To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then, is early; so that to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.
How now, you secret, black and midnight hags?
What is't you do?
I hope my midnight studies, to make our countries flourish in mysterious and beneficent arts, have not ungratefully affected your intellects. Bacon.
By night he fled, and at midnight returned
From compassing the earth; cautious of day. Milton.
After this time came on the midnight of the church, wherein the very names of the councils were forgotten, and men did only dream of what had past. Stillingsfleet.
Some solitary cloister will I chuse,
Coarse my attire, and short shall be my sleep,
Broke by the melancholy midnight bell. Dryden's Sp. Fryar.
In all that dark midnight of popery there were still some gleams of light, some witnesses that arose to give testimony to the truth. Atterbury.
They can tell precisely what altitude the dog-star had at midnight or midnoon in Rome when Julius Caesar was slain. Watts's Logick.
MIDRIFT. n. f. [mewrife, Saxon.] The diaphragm.
The midriff divides the trunk of the body into two cavities, the thorax and abdomen: it is composed of two muscles; the